

EDITORIAL

Dear Reader,

We are pleased to present to you the final issue of Pelviperineology Journal of 2025. Once again, we have prepared a high-quality issue featuring extremely important scientific studies—one that you won't be able to put down once you start reading. Our steadily increasing readership and the growing number of our readers from all four corners of the world are our sole source of motivation. We have always felt your support in carrying our journal to international standards, and we kindly ask for—and look forward to—this support continuing and growing.

On the other hand, as we have done before, we have also included studies that were presented at the 12th International Congress of Pelviperineology and Regenerative Medicine and accepted as oral presentations.

With my best wishes that 2026 brings health, happiness, success, prosperity, and peace.

Enjoy reading.
